

LOVE SCORNEO, HE CRIES LIKE GIRL IN COURT

Mrs. Hull Had Gardner,
Bostonian, Arrested for Annoying Her.

Louis Gardner, a prominent business and society man of Boston, cried like a hysterical schoolgirl in the Yorkville Police Court to-day when Mrs. Mabel Hull, a handsome young woman of Providence, R. I., refused to listen to his protestations of love.

Last night Policeman Barnes, of the East Fifty-first street station, was attracted by a racket on the stoop of No. 10 East Forty-seventh street. As he was about to enter the door, a woman was seen to be quarrelling. The woman saw the policeman and called him.

At the station it developed that he was Louis Gardner, thirty-six years old, President of the Nantasket Steamship Company, with offices in the Equitable Building in Boston, and treasurer of the National Gas Company, also of Boston. He is said to be a relative of Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, Boston's acknowledged society leader.

The young woman appeared as complainant when he was arrested before Magistrate Pool. She was Mrs. Mabel Hull, tall, statuesque and handsomely groomed in black, with a towering picture hat.

"I have been visiting friends in East Forty-seventh street," she told the Magistrate. "Two weeks ago Mr. Gardner came from Boston and stopped at the Hotel Marlborough. He has been annoying me with his attentions. He haunts the house, follows me on the street and begs me to speak to him. He seems to be completely infatuated. I think his mind must be affected."

"Are you engaged to the lady?" he asked the tearful Gardner, who still sat dejected and red-nosed in a high hat and a badly padded coat. "No," said Gardner. "She promised to marry me, but now she will not keep her word."

When Mrs. Hull left the court Clerk Dwyer, thinking Gardner might make a scene, told a policeman to follow her. Sure enough, Gardner was waiting outside and fell in behind the Providence widow, begging her to speak to him. Without a word she hastened toward Third avenue, with Gardner a few feet behind, his voice loud in pleading, and Barnes, the policeman, bringing up the rear.

So the procession passed from sight of the curious crowd.

Mrs. Hull is thirty-four years old. She is said to belong to a prominent Rhode Island family.

PROOF THAT SPRING IS HERE.

The spring feeling in the air was not all a mere matter of the thermometer yesterday. For the highest temperature officially recorded was 63 degrees at 3 P. M.—one higher than the maximum reached on Jan. 23 last. Thermometers in the street showed 68 degrees. Men puffed along carrying their hats in hand and dabbling at their foreheads and necks with damp handkerchiefs.

Open trails were running. The grass in the parks was green. Eight robins and a speckled thrush were seen in City Hall Park.

A rash youth wore a straw hat in Broad street at 2 P. M.—were it for a moment—then the curb brokers got it.

BOY KILLED UNDER HOOF OF HORSE

Warren Murphy Fell While Going to School on Roller Skates.

While on his way to school on roller skates to-day Warren Murphy, ten years old, of No. 73 Horatio street, fell under the hoofs of a team of truck horses and was fatally injured. He died two hours later in St. Vincent's Hospital.

Warren attended Public School No. 106, in West Tenth street, between Green-wich and Washington streets. He left home at 8:30 o'clock and skated on his rollers to the corner of Washington street. One of his skates caught in the stones of the cross-walk and he fell.

At that moment Daniel Barry, forty years old, of No. 104 Greenwich street, driving two big horses attached to a truck, was behind the boy. Before he could stop the horses had trodden upon the fallen lad.

Barry and Patrolman Fox lifted the boy's senseless form from under the hoofs and called an ambulance from St. Vincent's Hospital. Dr. Hovner, who responded, took the boy to the hospital.

Barry was arrested, arraigned in Jefferson Market Police Court.

TOO ILL TO WORK, HE ENDS HIS LIFE

Consumption Held Otto Klein in Its Grip and Drove Him to Suicide.

Unable to work because of consumption, and a burden upon his wife and his aged mother, Otto Klein blew his brains out to-day at his home, No. 428 East Eighty-first street. He was a painter, but he was too ill to work during the past two years.

Klein had four children. Three of them were at school to-day. His wife, eldest daughter and his mother were visiting in the neighborhood. He wrote three letters, one to Coroner Harburger, one to his wife and one to the press, stretched himself out on a bed and shot himself in the head. Death was instantaneous.

The two women and the child were in the house for upward of an hour before they discovered the suicide. They thought that Klein was asleep and had no desire to disturb him.

BOY THIEF LIVED ON TENEMENT ROOF

Beboun's Parents Hadn't Seen Him for Months Until To-Day in Police Court.

After living like a wild boy on tenement roofs and foraging in the morning hours, Joe Beboun, seventeen years old, saw today his parents for the first time in months when he was arraigned before Magistrate Crane, in Harlem Court.

The boy has been missing from the home of his parents, No. 73 Second avenue, for several months. A general alarm was sent out for him when he disappeared, but as he had always been a wild boy and could not be controlled, his father had little hope of seeing him again. When he did see him to-day he was willing to have the Magistrate act as he did in sending the boy to the New York Reform School for three years.

Yesterday afternoon Joe crept into William Beboun's bowling alley at No. 508 East Eighty-fourth street, at a time when he believed no one would be around to interfere. With an axe he hacked out a six-foot section of the water pipe. The roar of the escaping water was heard by Beboun, who came to investigate, forcing Joe to hide.

When the youth thought he had a good chance to escape he made a dash for the street, but was seized by the bowling alley man who pursued. Beboun and Policeman Koenemann, of the East Eighty-fourth street station, caught the boy on Eighty-fourth street.

From Joe and certain cronies they learned that the young thief had been living on roofs during the last part of the winter. His last place, they learned, was on No. 105 Avenue A. When the police investigated the roof of the tenement they found the boy's nest tucked snugly away under the water tank and entered around were evened empty milk bottles and forty boxes which had contained bakery goods. The youth had stolen them from doors in the mornings and kept alive on the food.

Mr. Beboun told the Magistrate he could not control the roving boy, that the water had inflamed great sores when all else failed, and leaves no bad after effects. Get a bottle to-day; it will save you years of suffering.

KEPT VANDERBILT FROM JAIL, HE SAID

Greene-Gaynor Trial Spiced with Talk of New York Millionaire.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 5.—When the United States Court met to-day the examination of defendant, Benjamin D. Greene, was resumed in the Greene-Gaynor case.

Capt. Greene was asked particularly about his relations with R. F. Westcott, Carter's father-in-law. He said he met him in 1880. After Carter's marriage he seldom ever saw him (Carter). He said he did not think he had seen Carter one hour in the aggregate in Savannah since 1883. He denied that Carter or Westcott were interested with him in the Orange (N. J.) sewer contract, though Westcott owned considerable property there.

Asked about Westcott's relation with the New York Central Railroad, witness said Westcott had often spoken of his intimacy with Sloan and the Vanderbilts.

"He told me that he kept W. H. Vanderbilt out of jail, and added, 'What do you think of that?'" said the witness. "He showed me a letter of commendation from one of the Vanderbilts at the time of his daughter's death, and referred to the younger Vanderbilts as 'the boys'."

The witness said that Westcott once offered Carter $100,000 to come to New York and go in the real estate business with him.

Death Lurks in Sick Kidneys

The kidneys are the weak link in the chain of life, and are daily carrying thousands of victims to untimely graves. Ninety men and women in every hundred have kidney trouble and don't know it because it's only when the trouble reaches an advanced stage that it's recognized as kidney disease.

We imagine we have dyspepsia, heart disease, nervous prostration and a hundred and one ills, but nine times out of ten the real trouble is that the kidneys are weak and diseased and that they are utterly unable to carry the waste matters out of the body, and the urine and blood accumulates in the system, and slowly but surely gives the way for Bright's disease, diabetes, blood poisoning and a horrible death in convulsions. Ask your doctor if this is not good, solid common sense.

SAY COLLEGE BOYS DIDN'T PAY FARE

After fighting with guards and policemen on the stairs of the subway station at One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street and Broadway this afternoon three students of the City College were arrested and taken to Harlem Court. Chief Inspector John Lowe, of the interview room, said that for weeks students have "rushed" the ticket-choppers and managed to board trains without paying fares.

The boys arrested are Benjamin Dorokob, aged sixteen, of No. 23 Market street, Hermann Litchman, aged seventeen, of No. 23 Madison street, and Aaron Robson, same age, of No. 23 East Third street.

Inspector Lowe said they were old offenders. To-day Lowe with Special Policeman Sheeran was waiting for the boys, and as they tried to rush the chopper there was a fight.
